Charlie Cully

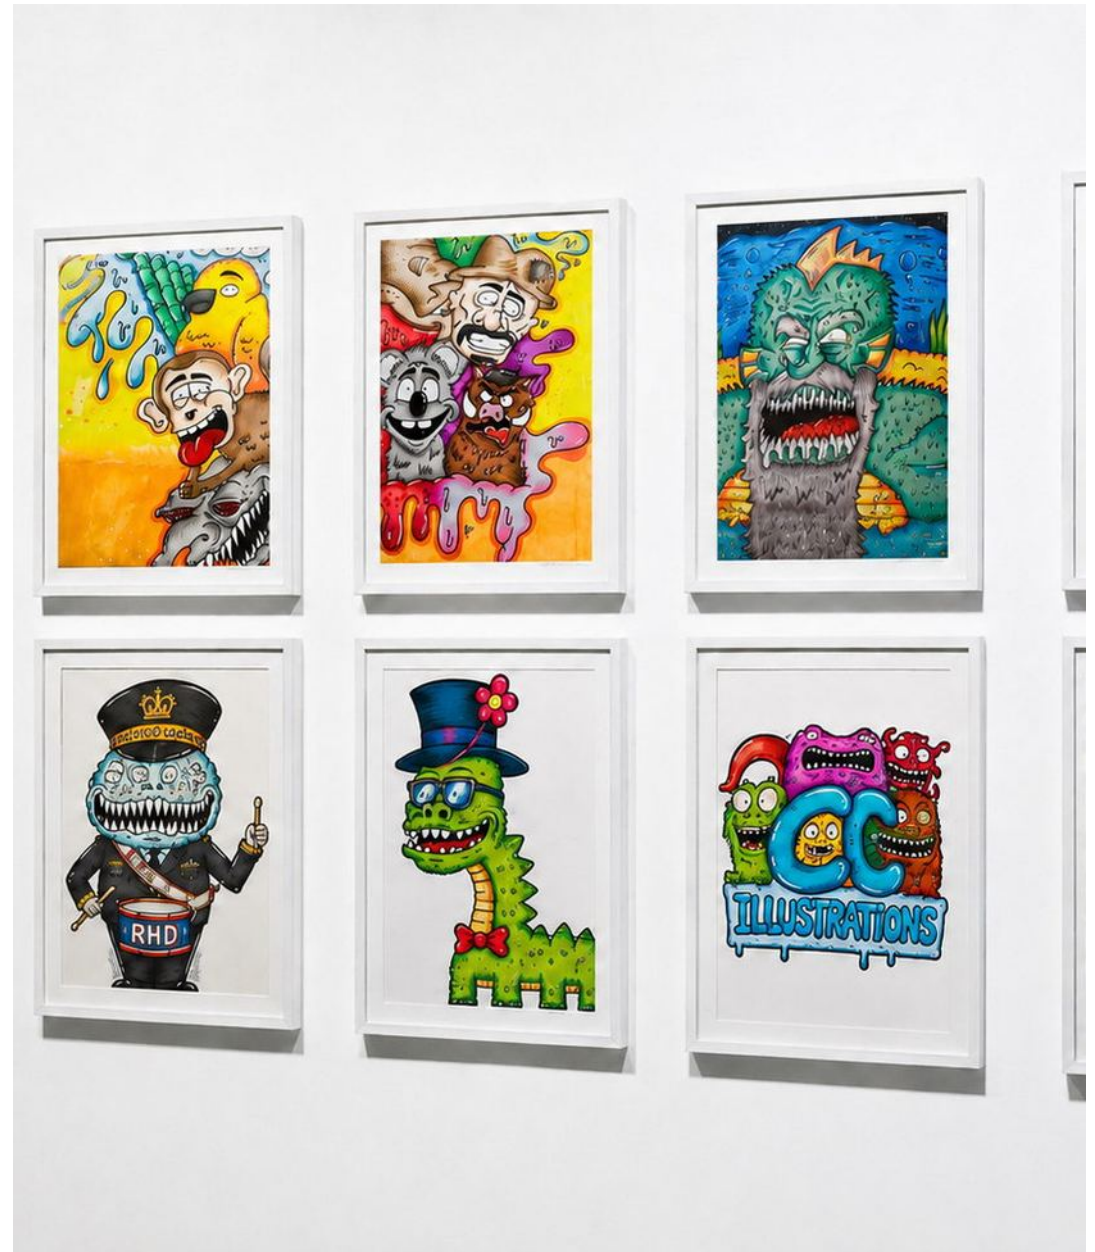

Charlie Cully is an illustrator working out of Northern Ireland under the name CC Illustrations. He draws dense, hand-built worlds — every one of them started with a black fineliner and finished in alcohol marker, with nothing generated, traced or filled in by a machine.

The work is built to be looked at twice. A single piece might hold sixty characters: a shark reading a bottle label, a submarine with a face, a small boy grinning through it all. Children find something new on the fourth read, which is exactly the point, and it is why his pages hold up as picture book spreads, as framed prints on a gallery wall, and at billboard scale.

His debut picture book, My Time Travel Adventure, is a rhyming story about a boy, a time-travel watch and the mess it makes of an ordinary week.

Early achievements

Two competition wins that set the direction

Little Wing Pizza Box Artwork

Winner of Little Wing's Pizza Box Artwork Kids Competition in 2019, aged twelve. The judges picked it out for its detail and confidence, and the piece was printed and put in front of every customer in the restaurant.

Portavogie Art Cup

Won in Primary 5 — the first prize Charlie ever took for drawing, and the moment the picture book returns to. The spread of him lifting the cup is drawn from this photograph.

Commissions & school visits

Commissions

Commissions open in limited slots each month. You see a pencil sketch before any ink touches the paper, and nothing is finished until you are happy with it. Character portraits take two to three weeks; large multi-character scenes four to six.

Brand, apparel and mural work, plus editorial and publishing projects, are quoted per project with usage terms agreed up front.

Schools & libraries

Live drawing sessions and character-building workshops for primary schools, libraries and festivals. A 45–60 minute live draw, a hands-on workshop, a Q&A on how a picture book gets made, and a signed print for the school. Every child leaves with a character they invented themselves.
